The Centre of Contemporary Dance will present Liebe Und Leben or Love and Life, a dance show that is based on the emotion of love and life itself.

"Our programme will showcase the work the establishment has been doing and it also gives us an opportunity to show what contemporary dance is all about, considering a lot of people are not aware about it," says Hrishikesh Pawar, founder of the dance school.

"The entire programme will be for an hour. It will also include our annual report, a short introduction, felicitation and of course the dance show," adds Hrishikesh.

Love and Life is a choreography that will have around 12 dancers performing in it. "The organisation's main objective is to promote contemporary dance in India," says Hrishikesh. That apart, the dance school experiments with technique-based and theme-based choreographies.

In a nutshell, the dance show will explore the emotion of love and its existence in people's lives. "It's like people are running after life and life is running after love and we create dance moves by trying to represent this cycle," explains Hrishikesh.
